Provenance
REPRODUCTIVE PSYCHOLOGY

Provenance (praa · vuh · nuhns): the origin and history of something — which is exactly what an evaluation investigates.

Independent Egg Donor Psychological Evaluations

NOW ENROLLING CLINIC PARTNERS — EVALUATION SERVICES BEGIN JANUARY 2027

Provenance Reproductive Psychology provides independent psychological evaluations of egg donor candidates for fertility clinics and donor agencies nationwide. Clinic onboarding — agreements, report-format alignment, and referral setup — takes place in November and December 2026, ahead of the January opening. The three circles in our name represent the generations every evaluation protects: the donor, the recipient family, and the child.

WHAT PROVENANCE PROVIDES

- Clinical interview with the donor candidate, including informed consent, medical and psychosocial history, understanding of genetic and future-contact realities, and screening for coercion
- Objective personality testing with the Personality Assessment Inventory (PAI), including validity-scale screening — defensiveness scales identify candidates who underreport psychiatric symptoms
- Written report with summary findings and a clear recommendation, delivered within two weeks of the completed interview and testing
- Secure telehealth administration in every PSYPACT participating state — no scheduling delays across state lines
- Structural independence by design: our evaluating psychologists have no contact with donors outside the evaluation — no workshops, no prior relationships, no dual roles

WHY PROVENANCE

- Independence by design: the report your medical director reads is uncontaminated by any prior relationship with the donor
- One protocol, every time: a structured, ASRM-aligned interview and PAI validity screening on every case, so your program receives consistent, comparable reports no matter which evaluator takes the case
- Reports written for a decision: Recommended, Recommended with Conditions, Deferred, or Not Recommended — with the reasoning documented
- Two-week turnaround, kept by process: standardized intake, testing, and report templates hold the schedule as volume grows

FEE AND TERMS

$500 per evaluation. A deposit of $250 reserves the evaluation slot; the remaining $250 is due on completion of the interview and testing, and the report is released on payment. Retainer arrangements are available for clinics and agencies with steady referral volume.

HOW WE WORK

1. Referral and scheduling

Your program refers the candidate to Provenance. We issue the deposit invoice; the evaluation slot is reserved on payment.

2. Intake and informed consent

The candidate completes informed consent and the Quickview® Social History — a standardized psychosocial history inventory administered through Pearson's secure online system — before any testing, so session time is spent on evaluation, not paperwork.

3. Objective testing

The Personality Assessment Inventory (PAI) is administered through PAR's secure online platform. Validity scales are screened before interpretation; an invalid protocol is flagged to you early, not buried in a report.

4. Clinical interview

A 60–75 minute structured telehealth interview with the evaluating psychologist, following our ASRM-aligned protocol.

5. Report and recommendation

Every report passes independent quality-assurance review by a second psychologist before delivery, within two weeks of the completed interview and testing. Our psychologists recommend; your medical director decides.

CLINICAL DIRECTION

Provenance was founded and is clinically directed by Dr. Brian Ragsdale, a licensed clinical psychologist (New Hampshire License #1688) holding PSYPACT authority (APIT #14094) to practice telepsychology across participating states. He earned his PhD in Clinical Psychology at the University of Rhode Island and completed his APA-accredited internship at the Jesse Brown VA Medical Center in Chicago.

Across more than twenty years of practice, Dr. Ragsdale's work has centered on psychological assessment — including teaching assessment at the graduate level — and he currently provides telehealth care through a national women's-health platform. He founded Provenance to bring one independent, consistent evaluation standard to third-party reproduction: the same protocol, the same rigor, and a report written for the decision your medical director has to make.

NEXT STEP

A brief call about your program's evaluation needs and report format. Clinics that enroll in November and December are scheduled first when evaluation services open in January 2027.

Provenance Reproductive Psychology

drbrianragsdale@gmail.com · drbrianragsdale.net